

THE HERPETOLOGICAL BULLETIN

Number 81, Autumn 2002

- Why do some chelonians seem so silly?
John Cloudsley-Thompson3
- A preliminary look at the spatial distribution of Treeboas at a site on Grenada
Robert W. Henderson and Richard A. Sajdak5
- The influence of breeding success on adult length in a population of Crested Newts
Arnold S. Cooke8
- Keeping and breeding Leopard Tortoises, Part 2. Accommodation, diet, and feeding
Robert Bustard12
- Reproduction in four species of turtles at the National Zoological Park, Washington D.C., USA
Carl H. Ernst, Arndt F. Laemmerzahl, Monika M. Holland and Roger Roscoe17
- Preliminary results of herpetofaunal survey work in the Rus Rus region, Honduras
James R. McCranie, Franklin E. Castañeda and Kirsten E. Nicholson22
- A terrestrial viviparous salamander into water: notes on the unusual larval aquatic development in Salamandra lanzai
Paolo Bergò and Franco Andreone29
- NATURAL HISTORY NOTES
- Rana temporaria* (Common Frog): tadpoles of the Common Frog eating the shells of pond snails
Rick Hodges31

BRITISH
HERPETOLOGICAL
SOCIETY

- Registered Charity No. 205666 -